Project Charter: Crisis Housing
along the Continuum of Care

DRAFT Version No: 1.3
Prepared by: Peter Brown and Ryan Kintz
Version as of: October 12, 2016

INTRODUCTION

1.1 BACKGROUND

The community of Ventura seeks to develop crisis housing along the continuum of care that supports vagrant and homeless individuals throughout the community. The City of Ventura aims to work together with various stakeholders including but not limited to the business community, the faith community, social services, non-profits, Ventura County and other Cities throughout the County.

The City currently does not provide all housing types along the continuum of care. In collaboration with the City of Oxnard, Ventura provides a temporary winter warming shelter every year. This year will be one of the last years that a winter warming shelter is available, provided a permanent Crisis Housing facility is built and available in the near future.

Crisis housing along the Continuum of Care (CHCOC) refers to the following types of housing: crisis housing, transitional housing, permanent supportive housing, and extremely affordable housing. A facility in this document is defined as a single facility or multiple facilities to provide all crisis housing types along the continuum of care.

1.2 PROJECT GOAL AND OBJECTIVES

1.2.1 PROJECT GOAL

Ventura seeks to provide all housing types along the continuum of care, including crisis housing, transitional housing, permanent supportive housing, and extremely affordable housing. In addition, it is vital that all supportive services are available and provided to individuals at the appropriate level regardless of the type of housing they are utilizing.

1.2.2 PROJECT OBJECTIVES

Each housing type along the continuum of care is an individual project piece within the overall project goal. Each housing type therefore has its own project objectives and project timeline as represented in the sections below.

1.2.2.1 Crisis Housing Objectives

Within the overall goal as stated above the following objectives have been identified:

1. Establish a strong partnership with all stakeholders involved with the shared mission of achieving the project goal (Stakeholder Group September 2016). Create stakeholder list and engage stakeholders in the project.
2. Stakeholder group will create standards for operator qualifications and facility management plan (October 2016).
3. Obtain MOU agreement with all Cities throughout the County (October 2016).
4. Engage property owners in the proposed zone change areas to ensure up-front communication and achieve property owner support (October 2016).
5. Obtain Planning Commission Approval of Zoning Updates (November 2016).
6. Develop Condition Use Permit Requirements (November 2016).
7. Achieve City Council approval of ordinance amendment (March 2017).
8. Develop funding mechanism to acquire facility and continually operate (April 2017).
9. Site potential locations of a homeless facility (April 2017).
10. Obtain Conditional Use Permit (April 2017).
11. Acquire operator and service providers that will run the facility (May – July 2017).
12. Purchase facility (August – October 2017).
13. Set up the facility with the operator and service providers and begin to operate (November – January 2017).

More than 4,000 people are homeless in San Jose, California. The 10th largest city in the US has long run out of beds to keep them sheltered.

A new law will make the city, located an hour's drive south of San Francisco, the first in the state to legally permit construction of tiny homes for the homeless, the San Jose Mercury News reports.

Starting in January, the city will temporarily make an exception to state building, safety, and health codes and build houses so small, they wouldn't ordinarily be approved for construction. The new residences will measure 70 square feet for individuals and 120 square feet for couples. It's still unknown how many people the program will accommodate.

Cute as they may be, tiny houses are often illegal.

Many US city and county governments (including San Jose prior to this new law) do not authorize residences under a certain square footage. Development codes have requirements related to plumbing, utilities, and building foundations that such unconventional dwellings don't meet.

That's unfortunate, because tiny homes offer a creative solution to the homelessness crisis. Tiny homes cost between $200 and $400 per square foot, depending on the materials used and their extravagance, according to Forbes, while the median list price in San Jose is $515 per square foot. Earlier this year, the city became the first in the US where the average home costs over $1 million.

In San Jose, where many of the city's homeless stay in camps along trails, creeks, and rivers, something had to give. The city declared a "shelter crisis" back in December for the purpose of building homes that skirt existing development codes, according to the Mercury News.

"This law really is the first of its kind," Ray Bramson, San Jose's homeless response manager, tells the Mercury News. "It will allow us to create bridge housing opportunities — a stable place people can live and stay while they're waiting to be placed in a permanent home."

San Jose isn't the first city to build tiny houses for the homeless. A number of cities, including Austin, Texas; Detroit, Michigan; and Portland, Oregon, have experimented with "tiny villages" for the homeless. Residents of these villages speaking to the media describe a sense of pride in their communities.

Dallas, Texas, embraces the national trend of giving the homeless permanent housing.

In Austin, the creator of one such village estimates it will save taxpayers up to $3 million annually that's normally spent on medical bills and criminal justice expenses for the homeless.

San Jose plans to hold a competition where people can submit designs for the new homes. Cost effectiveness and the ability to duplicate homes easily are two major criteria, according to Bramson. The future locations of the tiny homes is still to be determined.

The law that temporarily allows their construction in San Jose will be suspended in 2022, when the city will evaluate the program's impact.

Should it prove successful, other cities in California might look to San Jose to see how it's done.

San Diego

A 205-unit, 12-story development called Atmosphere is expected to complete construction in February 2017, paving the way for Downtown San Diego to take the edge off its housing supply crisis.

Located at 1453 4th Avenue — mere blocks from the site of the California Theatre, now under redevelopment into another apartment complex called the Overture — Atmosphere provides twofold benefits to city residents:

- 154 units dedicated to San Diegans employed locally; and
- 51 units for formerly homeless San Diegans.

Atmosphere's units, ranging from studios to three-bedroom apartments, will rent for approximately $390 – $1200 and are reserved for residents making 30% to 60% of the San Diego median income. The current median income for a family of four is approximately $63,400.

Additionally, Atmosphere will offer daily transitional services for its formerly homeless residents, including financial literacy workshops and workforce development training. These benefits are critical opportunities; San Diego ranked fourth nationally for the highest homeless population in 2015, according to the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD)'s Annual Homelessness Assessment Report (AHAR). The county's homeless population has steadily grown from twelfth-highest ranking in 2007.

Thus, Atmosphere is a huge progressive step forward for both homeless residents and locals struggling to remain living where they work. Homelessness issues in nearby Los Angeles and Orange County have spurred activists to push for similar supportive housing projects, aiming for the same benefits and transitional services for their residents that Atmosphere will provide for San Diegans.

Homelessness and affordable housing in San Diego

Atmosphere's future residents have one thing in common: they have likely been pushed out of the low-tier housing market due to excessive home price increases in the mid- and high-tiers. When mid-tier home prices rise beyond buyers' means, typically mid-tier homebuyers turn to low-tier housing instead. When mid-tier homebuyers trade down, those who ordinarily would have taken up low-tier housing are left to fend for themselves in California's ferocious urban rental markets.

Come 2017, Atmosphere will be there to catch some of these residents boxed out of the market. Further, Atmosphere's workshops and support services will increase the chances of formerly homeless residents ultimately entering the housing market after a transitional layover in the complex.

Real estate agents who assist tenants seeking low-cost housing need to keep an eye out for projects like Atmosphere and other below-market copy-cat projects. The tenant interest list for Atmosphere residence is still open, and applicants will be contacted in October 2016 with further information. Although the waiting list is likely to be extensive, Atmosphere's brazen forage into the notoriously expensive San Diego rental market is a beacon for future projects seeking change to follow.

Message from Erica Murray

Dear Friends,

The surprising outcome of the presidential election has raised fears that California's successful implementation of the Affordable Care Act and the waiver's delivery system reform efforts could be in jeopardy. It is indeed true that changes in federal laws, regulation, or policies could have a profound impact on public health care systems and their financing, and most importantly, on the patients who seek care in your systems. We know that many of you have, and are receiving, questions about these policy issues. For example:

- ? What are the potential impacts on the current 1115 Medi-Cal waiver's PRIME, GPP and Whole Person Care programs?
- ? What are the implications for converting Medicaid to a per capita cap or a block grant program?
- ? How would a potential rollback of the Medi-Cal expansion impact patients, providers and payors?

The CAPH/SNI staff is seeking to strike an appropriate balance between being best prepared for these possibilities, while not getting ahead of ourselves, as much remains unknown. We are working to consider likely potential scenarios and possible responses, as well as opportunities for coalition building, but we do not yet have clear answers. What is absolutely clear is: 1) The care you provide and the dedication to serving low income, vulnerable patients has never been more important; and 2) The best course of action today is to continue the important delivery system reform work already underway.

We also recognize that many of those hit hardest by the rhetoric in this campaign are your patients, and we will be supporting all our members as you seek to continue to serve those whose faith in public institutions may have been shaken.

We will keep you apprised of developments, and deeply appreciate the privilege of supporting your work. If you have any questions, please don't hesitate to reach out to us.

Sincerely,
Erica Murray

No Place Like Home

PURPOSE

To acquire, design, construct, rehabilitate, or preserve permanent supportive housing for persons who are experiencing homelessness, chronic homelessness or at risk of chronic homelessness, and who are in need of mental health services.

BACKGROUND INFORMATION

On July 1, 2016, Governor Brown signed landmark legislation enacting the No Place Like Home program to dedicate $2 billion in bond proceeds to invest in the development of permanent supportive housing for persons who are in need of mental health services and are experiencing homelessness, chronic homelessness, or at risk of chronic homelessness. The bonds are repaid by funding from the Mental Health Services Act (MHSA).

Key features of the program include:

- Counties will be eligible applicants (either solely or with a housing development sponsor)
- Funding for permanent supportive housing must utilize low barrier tenant selection practices that prioritize vulnerable populations and offer flexible, voluntary, and individualized supportive services.
- Counties must commit to provide mental health services and help coordinate access to other community based supportive services.

POPULATION TO BE SERVED

Seriously emotionally disturbed persons, and persons who require or are at risk of requiring acute psychiatric inpatient care, residential treatment, or outpatient crisis intervention because of a mental disorder with symptoms of psychosis, suicidality, or violence and who are experiencing homelessness, chronic homelessness, or at risk of chronic homelessness.

At risk of chronic homelessness includes persons who are at high risk of long-term or intermittent homelessness, including persons with mental illness exiting institutionalized settings, transition age youth experiencing homelessness or with significant barriers to housing stability.
